THE YEAR MOHAMAD HAJJO OPENED THE FIRST GARMENT FACTORY IN HOMS

One family, one line

Hajjo Group is a family textile group, founded in Homs in 1960 and run today from Cairo and Homs. It holds the cloth of the Biella mills in Cairo, runs two plants of its own, in Obour City and in Homs, and sells them to stores from a single piece and to men by the suit. From the mill in Biella to the floor in Homs to the shop in Cairo, one family owns every step.

Mohamad Hajjo

FOUNDER OF HAJJO GROUP

He built his first factory in Syria so that people of his town would have jobs.

Mohamad Hajjo was the first garment manufacturer in Homs. He opened the factory in 1960, and every line he opened after it was a door for someone else. His family runs the group today, in his name and in the same way.

Three moments

The first garment factory in Homs opened in 1960. Before the war the family ran over 80 stores across Syria.

They closed. Obour City opened in 2022. Homs reopens in March 2027, and the two plants will run as one line between two countries.

The group is rebuilding what once was.

Inside the jacket

OUTER CLOTH · CANVAS OR FUSIBLE · CHEST PIECE · SHOULDER PAD · SLEEVE HEAD · LINING

FUSED

A woven interlining is bonded to the front of the jacket under heat. It holds the chest and the lapel in shape, and it keeps the jacket light.

HALF CANVAS

A horsehair canvas is stitched into the chest and the lapel instead of bonded, and the rest of the front is fused. The canvas moulds to the man who wears it.

FULL CANVAS

The canvas is stitched in through the whole front and the shoulder is set by hand. Nothing is bonded. It moves with the body, and it lasts longest.

LINING

The cloth inside the jacket, against the shirt. Viscose breathes and slides on easily; silk is softer and costs more.

Anything on a suit, a coat, trousers or a vest can be adjusted, sampled and tested to your tech pack.
